"It is not always easy to be honest and good when around us we see those who appear to be enjoying rich returns from dishonest and unrighteousness. But every man has to live with himself through the long nights of the long years—and there is no reward on earth equal to that of the clear conscience."

ANOTHER year of substantial progress in Alabama has passed.

Responsible for this progress are many in the fields of religion, education, agriculture, commerce, industry, labor; and in federal, state, county and municipal governments, science, health and other activities.

Some have been directly active as individuals; others through strong support of organizations of which they are members and which have been active in the common effort of helping develop Alabama.

It has been our pleasure to work with many of them toward the achievement of goals which will make Alabama a still better place in which to live and work.

To them, and to the many citizens whose enthusiasm and support help make their effort successful, we extend our congratulations and reaffirm our policy of supporting worthwhile movements for the further development of Alabama.

MOVING IN

J. D. Smith, chairman of the Elba Housing Authority Board, stated Monday that the 20 units for whites and six for colored are completed and a number of families have moved in. More applications are on file than there are units to accommodate them so it will only be a matter of time until all units are full.

The First Cavalry Regiment at 2:30 and the other two sections departed at 4:30 the same afternoon for San Antonio, Tex. There was a delay because of failure to place cars at the expected time but the first section under the command of Lt. Col. Bibb Graves left the camp ment consists of 1,200 men, which is believed to be the largest in the U. S. Army. The men were full of enthusiasm for the journey and the orders to march were received with cheers as they went aboard the cars. The manner in which the regiment was organized, literally from the ground up and patterned into such fine shape in such a short time—two and one-half months—is considered a remarkable achievement and reflects much credit upon those who organized it. Alabama has sent to the Border, not only the sole cavalry regiment of the South but one of which any state may well be proud.

The Elba Town Council met yesterday evening in a regular monthly session with the following members present: J. B. Among acting mayor; Councilmen J. M. Garrett, G. E. Lindsey and J. O. English. Several complaints having been made that certain homes were unfair and burdensome, a large number of visitors were present. All complaints were heard and acted upon.

Henry J. Williamson, government statistician, sent out a warning of a meat shortage. He said, "The number of cattle has diminished and the population has increased to the extent during the past two years until they are now too widely divergent to hope to get an adequate supply for at least ten years." Mr. Williamson has been touring the western cattle country for the past month and said the cattle shortage is really alarming.
